Types of PIN codes	Principal use:
① Digital certificate for signature	It will be used to confirm your identity when you create or send an electronic document. E.g.: Filing electronic applications (such as e-Tax), registering for private online transaction (such as online banking)
② Digital certificate for user identification	It will be used when logging in to Internet websites or multi-purpose terminals at convenience stores. E.g.: Convenience store issuance services (※1) · Use of MynaPortal (※2) · Setting my key ID (※3), etc.
③ Basic residence register	It will be used to change an information stored on My Number Card such as address and name. E.g.: Move-in from another city, moving within the city, marriage, etc.
④ Card info input assistance	You can omit entering your name and address when making various online applications using My Number Card.

※1 Convenience store issuance service … It is possible to obtain an official certificate such as Certificate of Residence, etc. at a convenience store.

※2 MynaPortal … It is an online service operated by the government that allows residents to check the information that administrative organs possess, through information provision network system, and receive notices on various services from those organizations.

※3 My key ID … It is an ID given upon request made by the card holder which is a different ID from My Number. It is possible to use a wide range of public and private services.

Advance preparation is required to apply online through a computer, etc. Further details are available at Japan Agency for Local Authority Information System, public personal identification service portal site (in Japanese) (<https://www.jpki.go.jp/index.html>).
